MAX ROGATES HOOPER FOR 1920

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY ON THE WESTERN FRONT, NOV. 19—

Burgomaster Max, of Brussels, one of the heroic figures of the war, motored to Bruges on Sunday where he spent an hour conferring with King Albert, afterwards giving an interview to the correspondents in which he eulogized Brand Whitlock, Arthur Hays Sulzberger, to Belgium, and Ad Herbert Hoover, the American Food Administrator, for their work in behalf of Belgium.

"I will soon be back in my own city of Brussels," said the Burgomaster. "They (the Germans) wanted to send me to Holland or Switzerland, but I said no, you take me forcibly from Brussels and then send me back."

M. Max thought so highly of Mr. Hoover that he asked if he had any chance for the Presidency of the United States. He added that he would like to see the Food Administrator in that office.

When Burgomaster Max was carried away from Brussels by the Germans he had a heavy black mustache. Today it is streaked with gray and the man himself is about twenty pounds lighter in weight.

Cardinal Mercier, another heroic Belgian, was seen just as he was leaving a church after chanting a Te Deum.

"That did not come a moment too soon," said he after being reminded that the war had come to an end.

The cardinal was particularly interested to know whether President Wilson was coming to Europe to the peace conference. The cardinal cut short his interview on the pretext that he was very tired, and drove away in his carriage.

SAYS HUBBY SPANKED HER UNTIL SHE CRIED

PARIS, Ill., Nov. 19.—Emma Williams, granted a divorce from Fred Williams on the ground of cruelty in the circuit court, testified that her husband laid her across his knee and spanked her until she cried. The defendant, claiming the complainant was his wife, and he thought he had a right to correct her as he saw fit.

SENATORS FAVOR PRESIDENT'S GONG

President Wilson's proposed attendance at the Peace Conference was, for the most part, endorsed by United States Senators today.

"It will have the effect of giving emphasis to the things that the President stands for," said Senator William D. Hoel, Democrat of Nebraska, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee. "It is entirely in accordance with precedent that the head of the country should meet the heads of the other countries interested. I understand that the heads of the countries interested met at the Vienna conference in the early part of the last century—the conference that ended the Napoleonic wars."

"Of course, it is a most unusual trip, but the conference is the most unusual and important ever held," said Senator Smith, Democrat of Georgia. "I am gratified that the President will be present. I believe that his influence will be most valuable, and will contribute to the future welfare of the countries of the world as well as to that of the United States, which is the leading nation of the world."

"The decision of the President to go to the Peace Conference is eminently proper," Senator Sheppard declared, of Texas, declared.

"I think he has made the decision to go."

Senator Watson, Republican of Indiana, said that President Wilson's "unbounded and personal ambition is responsible for his decision to go to the conference."

"With the many important duties of the President, it is a country's business that he might well remain here. With the many American diplomats of great ability and wide experience, it is true, but the President, could render great service at the peace table and fully protect American rights and provide for the future of the world."

Senator Keeney, Republican of Iowa, said: "I think the President has done enough hard work to have a little vacation."

There are two sharply opposing elements that today are gravely threatening the success of the peace conference.

First, there is the open and flagrant sympathy of the German press in France, Japan, and in South America in the expectation that such sympathy can be capitalized at the peace table. This propaganda is of the most insidious sort.

The suggestions by Dr. Solf, the German foreign secretary, that unless the armistice terms in France, as they touch on occupation of the territory west of the Rhine, are not modified it will "make for the spread of Bolshevism," is a typical German line. His statement that "peace is the modification" the effect shall be that "we shall inevitably advance toward more or less Bolshevist conditions, which might become dangerous to the world," is another example of the covert threats which Germany has made so familiar throughout the war, diplomats and Administration officials pointed out today. The intimation that there is danger for France and Italy and even Great Britain in the "Red" movement in Germany. This was bitterly resented today by officials, who are entirely familiar with the subject.

Another typical bit of German propaganda, the changes on which are being worked in every possible way, is that Germany actually faces starvation and needs an early peace. This also is a fabrication. Germany no longer needs to husband her resources in food. She has been promoted to the status of a victor, and her resources can be broken into her reserves for present needs. But the German propaganda organization is using the food appeal for sympathy, and is designed to be capitalized for peace conference.

Lined up on the other side is the "unforgivable" element in the countries that have suffered the most severely through German atrocities and German violation of all of the rules of civilized warfare. This is the element which believes that Germany should be punished severely as a world power and boycotted at all times in the markets of the world. It includes British and British colonial leaders, French, Italian, and Belgian leaders of thought. This element already openly is calling for personal punishment to be meted out to all central power officials—German, Austrian, Bulgarian, and Turk—responsible in any way for the atrocious war for four years have horrified civilization. Aiding its cause are the men who have advocated the taking of the peace conference to Germany, the central powers either voice or vote in the deliberations of that body.

REFUSED TO CARRY COAL; SENTENCED TO 15 YEARS

CAMP MEADE, Md., Nov. 19.—Objectors who carried their stubbornness to an extreme are now paying the penalty. A sentence of twenty-five years, reduced to fifteen, has been imposed upon Private Russell S. Powell, of the medical department, who refused to carry coal for the medical detachment for the cooking of food he was to eat.

The objectors who have managed to keep from being arrested are to be discharged. There are about 225 of them.

Demobilization work is now under way. Property is being checked in by the 6,000 men of the development battalion, taking special treatment in a day or two the actual discharges will be passed out to a large part of these men.

BERLIN COPS DECIDE TO BECOME POLITE

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 19.—Berlin police authorities have adopted resolutions declaring that it is their intention to do everything possible to suppress the "Red" and "to let political considerations rule in their relations with their fellow-citizens."

The resolutions asked the citizens of Berlin to forget their old grievances against policemen and help them.

LILLIAN'S BEAUTY COMES FROM SOAP

Every woman in the world since time immemorial has wanted just one thing, with the possible exception of a rich and handsome husband, and that is a copy of Lillian Russell's beauty secrets.

And now comes Lillian Russell, so pink and white and fair and young as to be the despair of women less than half her age and declares she hasn't a secret from any one in the world, and that all women can be as young and beautiful as she if they will keep their bodies in condition by physical exercise, their minds active by some congenial occupation, and use plenty of good soap and water.

There it is—just plain soap and water, when every woman in the world had supposed that it must be some magic lotion—something handed down by Mme. Recamier or Du Barry or even Helen of Troy herself.

If America's most famous beauty had her way every girl would be forced to have one or two years' compulsory physical training, and every woman would be obliged to take a course in the use of soap and water.

And instead of rouge and powder, facial massages and other beauty culture contraptions, she would be introduced to a bar of good pure soap and a bowl of fresh warm water.

"I really am the result of a very wonderful mother," Miss Russell declared, and the writer tried hard to listen but found she had only eyes. Of course she had expected to find Lillian Russell not quite so lovely or beautiful as rumor would have it, and there Lillian Russell sat, younger, fresher, much more beautiful than one could possibly imagine.

But Lillian Russell was talking of the mother who made her study and exercise, made her eat right and think right, and herself lived to be seventy-four and still beautiful.

Reared on Sufrage Milk.

"I was really reared on sufrage milk, the beauty confessed. 'As a girl I knew Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Susan B. Anthony. I was taught that woman could be anything she wanted to be, and I believe it at more fully every day I live. 'I can use physical force to put myself in any condition I want, and by that I don't mean light calisthenics. I mean real training, strengthening, and developing women just as the army has done with the men in the past year."

"And don't let anyone tell you women's progress, or that they will have to take a back seat when the men come back from the war."

Works Hard.

Miss Russell knows that hard work agrees with her, because she never worked so hard as during this last year. Seven thousand comfort kits went from her hands to soldiers and sailors, and she is going "around the circuit" this winter for the sole purpose of paying for liberty bonds, war savings stamps, and all the other things she has done to help the war effort.

And just when the writer was wondering just what kind of soap the beauty used, along came the beauty's husband, Alexander P. Moore, owner of the Pittsburgh Leader, and upset all calculations.

"How does she do it?" he repeated the questions, "because she has the same disposition in the world. I've been married to her six years, and she treats me just as nice as she treats you. Why, she treats me just like company!"

There is a possibility that a bill may pass Congress, however, which the President would like to veto. In the event he might be in a difficult position to exercise his prerogative. It is not believed, however, that the Democrats, who will be in control of both houses of Congress, will permit the final passage of any legislation which the President would ask to be held up during his absence.

There is some discussion that arrangements might be made by which fast torpedo boats will be brought into service to carry across the waters such legislation as the President may wish to veto. It is not believed that the President would have made any plans for the trip to France unless the constitutional difficulties in the path of his absence had been cleared away.

"Father" Armand, head of the "Tribe of Israel," in Fairfax county, will be tried today in the circuit court on a serious charge, brought against him by Mrs. Phillips, a member of the "tribe."

Commonly referred to in charge is the time when "Father" Armand, "borrowed" the wife of another member of the tribe.

From those acquainted with the rules of the "Farm of Israel" and from evidence submitted at the preliminary hearing, "borrowing" a wife was a custom of the "Father" of the tribe. At the particular instance cited in the indictment, permission had not been granted by the husband and the warrant against Armand resulted.

Armand and the owner of a large tract of land known as the Berkley place, but called the "Farm of Israel" by the citizens of Fairfax county, he and several members of the flock lived in perfect fellowship for several years. He claims to have "cast out" Mrs. Phillips and her husband because of irreverence and that the charge was then made against him.

LILLIAN RUSSELL.

come back from the war. They cannot go back. Nothing can take away from them the ground they have gained. It's all in the hands of the women themselves."

When she came back to an idle life, to play bridge in hot, stuffy rooms and sit in a rocker reading a novel on an afternoon like this, for instance, they deserve to lose their place in the world and their beauty and their complexions and everything else.

Works Hard.

Miss Russell knows that hard work agrees with her, because she never worked so hard as during this last year. PRESIDENT TO LOSE NO POWERS BY TRIP

By leaving the confines of the United States to go to France to take part in the preliminary discussions of the peace treaty, President Wilson will not remove himself as the Chief Magistrate of the American nation, leading constitutional lawyers of the United States senate declare.

Vice President Marshall, they added, cannot be designated by Congress to assume the role of acting President during the President's absence under the Constitution.

The duties of President, it was pointed out, will fall upon the shoulders of Vice President Marshall only if the continued absence of Mr. Wilson makes it impossible for him to act as President. In that case Congress would have to determine whether Mr. Wilson was unable to discharge the duties and powers of President by his absence from this country.

The Federal Constitution, in passing upon the disability of a President, provides as follows:

"In case of the removal of the President from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability both of the powers and duties of said office, the same shall devolve upon the Vice President, and Congress may, by law, provide for the case of removal, death, resignation, or inability both of the President and Vice President, declaring what officer shall then act as President, and such officer shall act in the stead and with the power of the President."

In going to France, several Senators say, the President will not place himself in a position where he will be unable to discharge his duties and powers of President. He will be leaving this country on a mission in behalf of this nation, they say, and the cables will keep him constantly in touch with his work and enable him to discharge his duties.

The only drawback, they point out, would come in the President leaving Washington during a session of Congress. The Constitution gives the President ten days in which to approve or veto bills after they have passed Congress. If he does not act within that time, the measure becomes a law. Since the bulk of the legislation passed by Congress is approved by the President, his failure to sign would not make any material difference.

There is a possibility that a bill may pass Congress, however, which the President would like to veto. In the event he might be in a difficult position to exercise his prerogative. It is not believed, however, that the Democrats, who will be in control of both houses of Congress, will permit the final passage of any legislation which the President would ask to be held up during his absence.

There is some discussion that arrangements might be made by which fast torpedo boats will be brought into service to carry across the waters such legislation as the President may wish to veto.
